EDITORS NOTE: One of the treasures of this Law School is a marvelous collection of photographs. I have been using these pictures for front and back covers of the Gargoyle apparently to the enjoyment of alumni who often write for copies. Since the final story in the last issue related to athlete-lawyers, I chose a "filler" picture showing a Law School baseball team from the past. Never did I guess the amount of interest this picture would generate. Calls and letters came from across the country protesting the absense of a caption or proposing their own. While I do apologize for any annoyance I may have caused, it does seem that I have hit on a high interest feature for the magazine. Whenever possible I intend to fill the back page with a mystery photo. Sometimes they will come from the pile with no captions, sometimes from the pile with a few hints as to origin. I invite you to help us fill in the blanks; your contributions will be reported in succeeding issues. The picture on this issue's back cover has no caption although the location is clearly the old Law Building.

The correct caption for the now famous picture from Vol. 11, No. 3 is:

Back row: Oliver Rundell, Don Heide, Arthur McLeod, Roy Tulane, Howard Hall, Erick Smith, Charles Bunn, "Dean" Harris (custodian), Frank Boessel, and Jake Beuscher.

1979-80 FUND DRIVE REPORT

Like the Greek god of the theater this year's Alumni Fund Drive report both smiles and frowns. The good news is in fact two-fold: the total amount of contributions increased for the second year in a row and reached the second highest total in the eleven year history of the Drive. The average contribution jumped to an all time high of almost $250 per contributor, a truly remarkable amount. Readers with mathematical minds can see in these two facts our cause for concern. Continuing a four year slump, the number of alumni showing their support for this Law School declined to 461 this year, or about 7% of all alumni. Our largest number of contributors, in 1966, was 666, or about 12%. While that rate of participation is itself not particularly impressive, it was almost twice the current rate. If more gave a little, a few would not have to give so much.

Many private law schools, with well established traditions of voluntary giving, achieve four or five times our rate of participation. A few public law schools consistently do that well. In a time of inflation and reduced governmental funding, all law schools are being forced to place more emphasis on voluntary support programs. As we reexamine our Alumni Fund Drive and other fund raising efforts, you, our alumni, are going to hear more from us concerning our needs and the ways you can help.

One other note about this year's results: we are encouraged by the help received from our younger alumni. The number of givers out of school ten years or less matches any other 10-year group despite the fact that they have lower average incomes and higher debts. These younger alumni have also demonstrated their continued interest in their School in other ways. The Class of 1975 held a lively 5th reunion at this year's Spring Program and raised a class gift for the school.

With such help and with our own rededication of effort in fund raising the future may be as bright as the past has been. Thank you for your assistance.

ON THE LIGHTER SIDE

Finding a job can be a troubling task for a law student. Those who are successful are usually those who best keep a sense of humor about the process. Believe it or not there are things to laugh about in placement, no matter what your perspective. One interviewer reported an incident several years ago where a candidate entered the room, dropped to his knees and asked, "Would it help if I begged?"

That applicant might have received the following letter which originally appeared in an ABA Law Student Division publication:

Smith, Anderson, Milton & Jones
Plaza Building
Washington, DC 20000

Mr. William L. Fang
The Law School
Somewhere, US

Dear Mr. Fang:

I was glad to have met with you recently to discuss the possibility of a summer clerkship with our firm. We appreciate your interest but regret that we are not able to ask you to continue the interview process.

As I am sure you realize, an attorney's time is extremely valuable and a member of a firm has a responsibility both to himself and his associates to be frugal in its expenditure. The immense expense of interviewing the large number of job applicants we see each year, therefore, must be justified in some way. As to those students whose grades, extracurricular activities and personalities make them attractive prospective employees, we tend to view the expense as an investment in the firm's future, whether we eventually hire a particular individual or not. Others give us invaluable insight into the changing nature of legal education and the profession as a whole. Still others present us with an opportunity for invigorating and refreshing dialogue, the value of which we feel should not be discounted.

However, on the rare occasion when we interview a student whose credentials, demeanor, conversation, appearance and background can in no way justify the amount of time expended on his behalf, we are certain that you will agree that it is only fair that student be billed for the reasonable value of that time. Therefore, please find enclosed our bill for $24.68 (twenty-four dollars and sixty-eight cents), figured at an hourly rate of $50 (fifty dollars) and including secretarial, mailing and other costs.

Best wishes for your future professional success.

Sincerely yours,
Fred R. Milton

FACULTY BAR MEMBERSHIPS

In a recent survey of faculty memberships in various state bars, 41 members responded including one non-lawyer. The results are as follows:

Wisconsin	27
Dist. of Columbia	4
California	4
Illinois	3
New Jersey	2
Ohio	1
Minnesota	1
Florida	1
Massachusetts	1
Iowa	1

Eight professors belong to more than one bar, accounting for the total of fifty responses. The forty lawyer-professors indicate a total of 223 years of practice experience, an average of 5.5 years each, before joining our faculty.

CARTER TAPS JONES

Prof. James E. Jones, Jr. has been selected by President Carter to chair a special panel designed to resolve disputes between the Merit Systems Protection Board, which guards the rights of persons under the civil service system, and the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, which investigates employment discrimination cases. The panel was created by the recently enacted Civil Service Reform Act.

Professor Jones, who graduated from UW Law School in 1956, joined its faculty in 1969. He currently teaches courses in the labor and discrimination area at the Law School and related courses in the Industrial Relations Research Institute.

NEW YORK AREA RECEPTION

Thursday, May 15, 1980 found a small but enthusiastic group of New York area alumni meeting for lunch at the Wall Street Club. Organized by Edward L. Levine ('52), the group heard Dean Helstad report on the status of the Law School. Eighteen alumni attended and another 27 indicated their interest in future functions. There are about two hundred alumni in the greater New York area.

A few senior alumni reported that such gatherings, often on an informal basis, were more common in years past. R. Worth Vaughan ('28) remembers that a group used to gather for lunch every Monday. "Sometimes there were as few as two, sometimes six or eight," he recalls.

One of those who could not attend would have won the prize for coming the farthest if he had. John N. Kramer, Jr. ('68) wrote from his firm's office in Abu Dhabi that he hopes to join the group after he is rotated back to New York. We all hope he returns with a few barrels of oil.

ACTIONS OF THE BOARDS

The combined Boards of Directors and Visitors of the Wisconsin Law Alumni Association held a business meeting during the Spring Program in April. At that time the date for this year's Visitation was set for October 19-20. Members considered the investment report and recommended reconsideration by the Investment Committee of our present allocation of funds. Budgets for the various alumni accounts were approved as presented by the Dean. A general discussion of fund raising activities and plans was begun. This discussion is expected to continue as the effort in this area is reexamined and revised. The report of the nominating committee was presented and approved later by the general membership. The report was as follows:

For the Board of Visitors

Kirby Bouthilet ('73), Green Bay
Peter Christianson ('77), Milwaukee
Sue Wiesner-Hawley ('73), Fenimore
Tom Anderson ('73), Milwaukee, Chairman

For Board of Directors

Jeffrey Bartell ('68), Madison
Mark Bonady ('73), Milwaukee
George Curry ('72), Platteville

For President-elect

Roy Stewart ('51), Racine
